

A report from a former student

Dear members of the committee,

I have recently been asked, after having been a student at this honourable institution for the past month, to write a report about my first week's impressions in the college.

As I said, I am a student in mathematics at Cork College and have been for the last month. The week I arrived there was an established programme of events specially for new students like myself.

On Monday, we toured around the city of Cork and its surroundings; the only problem was that there were plenty of places to visit and only a little time to do it. Moreover, we needed a map to find the place we were in at each moment, so it would be interesting for future's events to have them.

The next day, we were given, by very kind people from the college, some useful information about the courses we were going to take.

On Wednesday, I decided to do some sport and took part in a basketball competition, during which I made some friends.

On Thursday I was just very tired from all that walking done during the previous days.

On Friday, the last day of our welcome week, we had a great party, in which even some professors took part... Next year it could be longer in my opinion.

To sum up, it was a great welcome week for me, and I think for most of the rest of the new students too.
